LOGLINE

Billie #hatesherjob and is desperate for a change, but when she quits months before getting married, she's faced with balancing the wedding and the launch of a new tech start-up company with a bunch of misfits called Freelancers Anonymous.
THE STORY

SYNOPSIS

Rushing to get to her pointless job every morning sucks, and Billie’s (Lisa Cordileone) not putting up with it anymore. After telling everyone to f*ck off, she unfortunately has to break the news to her fiancée (Natasha Negovanlis). When she meets a ragtag group of women who are also looking for employment, Billie is struck with the idea of cultivating their skills to create an app, by designing a prototype for an investor launch party.

Billie takes the risk of her life, lying to her fiancée in order to buy time until her plan for Freelancers Anonymous can come to fruition. When the wedding and the launch party are booked for the same day, it all comes to a head.

DIRECTORS STATEMENT

Freelancers Anonymous is a necessary story to be told. The new generations need to see as references, women entrepreneurs who reinvent themselves, and find new professional opportunities by collaboration. I set the characters in a time when women, their potentials, skills and talents are ignored, and undervalued, even by themselves. These thoughts have been, (and still are) in the minds of many women for years.

To present this concept visually I have chosen to use set, wardrobe and art design of the 70s in contraposition with the technological world they choose to learn. Like in my previous feature, I have had the pleasure to work with an ensemble cast who fill each character making them unique and real. This is an independent movie made with so much passion and love and with the help of a lot of professionals who believe in bringing this idea to life. I feel proud to be a part of this.
